Financial Agreement

As I raise funds for my short-term missions trip and work, I understand that:

1. The money raised, although given by donors I know and have contacted, is not in any way “mine,” nor is it only for the expenses of “my” short-term trip or project.
2. In the view of the Internal Revenue Service of the U.S. government, the donation is made to the Latin America Mission’s Short Term Program, and may be receipted as such because of the supervision of the Latin America Mission over that program.
3. My name should not appear anywhere on the donor’s check; rather, the donor must make the check out to the Latin America Mission, and add, on a separate note, that they wish to support my trip and ministry project as part of the LAM’s short term program.
4. The Latin America Mission will, to the best of its ability, honor the intent of the donor.
5. Once a donor has been issued a receipt for a donation, the LAM cannot return a donation.
6. If donors who know me donate more funds than are explicitly needed for my part in the Short Term Program of the LAM, the mission cannot and will not return those funds to the donor, or to me, but the funds will be used by the Short Term Program as a ministry of the LAM.
7. However, if not enough donations come in to the LAM to support my part of the costs of the Short Term program, any payments to or for me allowed under LAM policy may be delayed until sufficient funds have accrued to meet my expenses.

I understand and agree to the above financial policies as a short-term missionary under the program of the Latin America Mission.
